The Nile Project announces its second Nile Gathering and first Africa Tour

The Nile Project is pleased to announce that its second Nile Gathering will take place in Kampala, Uganda from January 23 to February 13, 2014. The Nile Project will then set sail on its first Africa Tour, performing concerts and leading Nile Workshops at universities in Uganda, Tanzania, Kenya, Ethiopia, and Egypt.

In January 2013, the Nile Project held its first Nile Gathering in Aswan, Egypt. After two sold out concerts in Aswan and Cairo, the project's first album, Aswan, was released. NPR Music named it one of the '5 Must-Hear International Albums of the Fall' and it was selected for Songlines 'Top of the World' annual collection. "We were very happy that the Nile Project's music struck a deep chord with our Egyptian audiences last January," said Mina Girgis, Nile Project Executive Director. "This year, we are hoping to build on this success by inviting a more diverse pool of musicians, expanding our performance circuit to more Nile Basin countries, and launching the project's education and innovation programs at partner universities."

During the second Nile Gathering, 14 musicians from Burundi, Egypt, Ethiopia, Kenya, Rwanda, Sudan, and Uganda will collaboratively compose a new body of songs inspired by the Nile Basin's diverse musical traditions and instruments. This music will be performed during the Africa Tour concerts and will culminate in Jinja - the Nile Project's second album.

By exposing audiences to the music of their river neighbors, these performances are meant to foster cross-cultural empathy and inspire environmental curiosity among Nile citizens. Despite ancient relations among East African civilizations, the 437 million citizens of the 11 nations sharing the longest river in the world have few avenues to connect beyond their state borders. Polarized by strenuous political relations and unhelpful media, most see the Nile as a water security question rather than an opportunity for synergistic relations within one integrated watershed. At a time when riparian tensions over the proposed Grand Ethiopian Renaissance Dam have captured headlines around the world, the Nile Project offers an alternative path for dialogue and cooperation.

Along with the concerts, the Nile Project is planning to roll out a number of university-based dialogue and education programs that build on this musical inspiration to help students understand Nile-related development challenges in a more systemic way. These programs begin with interactive Nile Workshops that allow university students to reflect on their understanding of their river's environmental and cultural challenges. Other university activities include multidisciplinary online courses, ecological and cultural mapping expeditions, student exchange programs, Nile choirs, an annual short film festival and a virtual dialogue and collaboration platform.

Acting as the capstone to the university programs, the Nile Prize will channel the new understanding gained from the dialogue and education programs towards concrete action by incentivizing students to develop innovative solutions to regional challenges. Over the span of a year, the program will support university students and faculty in the design and implementation of local solutions based on principles of sustainable, community-centered design. More than just an award, the prize will guide students through a series of educational and skills-based trainings, community-focused exercises, and transboundary collaborations. The intention will be to build the capacity of students, civil society organizations, and communities with the skills, knowledge, and resources needed to collaboratively design and deliver new innovations that improve the multifaceted sustainability the Nile Basin. Following the upcoming workshops, the Nile Project will hold information sessions to launch the inaugural Nile Prize and introduce the 2014 'Food sustainability' theme.

The Nile Project is also currently planning tours to Europe in summer 2014 and North American in winter 2015.

Background on the Nile Project

The Nile Project was founded in 2011 to address the Nile Basin's cultural and environmental challenges. Using music, education, and innovation programs, the Nile Project inspires, informs, and empowers university students to work together to foster the sustainability of their ecosystem. The Nile Project curates collaborations among musicians from the 11 Nile countries to expose audiences to the cultures of their river neighbors. These musical experiences foster cross-cultural empathy and inspire environmental curiosity to shift the Nile from a divisive geo-political argument to a uniting East-African conversation.

Executive Director: Mina Girgis

Mina Girgis is an ethnomusicologist and entrepreneur who specializes in curating and producing innovative musical collaborations across diverse styles. Relying on his background in hospitality, Mina explores new ways to design environments conducive to learning, making, and experiencing music. In 2009, he founded Zambaleta, a nonprofit community World Music school based in San Francisco. In 2011, Mina created the Nile Project. He is currently developing Zambaleta into an online marketplace for music lessons. Mina writes about World Music education, arts entrepreneurship, applied ethnomusicology, the representation of Gypsies within the World Music industry, and the role of music in the Arab Spring.

Musical Director: Miles Jay

Contrabassist, composer, and arranger Miles Jay has collaborated extensively around the world in a wide range of ensembles and productions. Since receiving his BA in music from UCSB, he lived and worked 6 years in Egypt, Lebanon, Syria and Greece, furthering his musical immersion in the modal music of the Middle East and the Mediterranean. Dedicating himself to developing the voice of the contrabass within these various regional musical aesthetics, he has worked extensively with the ensembles of Youssou N'Dour, Ziad Rahbani, Fathy Salama, Ross Daly, Naseer Shamma, Niyaz, Mashrou3 Leila, and the Cairo Symphony Orchestra, performing at venues such as Carnegie Hall, the Emirates Palace, the United Nations, and the TED convention

Long Beach. In addition to his unique playing technique, Miles has personally designed and hand built a new type of double bass inspired by several traditional instrumental designs, as well as the need for a compact, travel friendly acoustic bass. As a composer, Miles is a 2013 Sundance film composers fellow and has just released his debut solo album titled "the Troposphere".
